

VIVRA WORLD FLAGSHIP WORKSHOP- IBIZA_GATHERING

SYSTEMIC LEADERSHIP: FROM INSIGHT TO ACTION

SEE → REIMAGINE → ACT

An immersive three-day working session for leaders, entrepreneurs, investors and changemakers. Through facilitated dialogue, systems exploration and hands-on work on real projects, participants learn to see interconnected challenges differently, apply regenerative principles to real-world initiatives, explore how individual projects can become part of stronger ecosystems, and turn collective insight into action.

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVE

To move participants from understanding systems to acting within them: developing the mindset of a systemic leader, discovering and applying regenerative economic principles, strengthening real projects through a systems lens, and connecting people, capital and capabilities to build ecosystems capable of creating greater collective value.

DAY 1: SEE THE SYSTEM

Systems Thinking & Future Systems

Question: What system are we trying to change?

SESSION

DESCRIPTION

Seeing the System

Opening circle and facilitated exploration of what a thriving future could look like. Participants map interconnected challenges, relationships, incentives and feedback loops, moving beyond isolated problems to understand the systems that shape them.

From Problems to Systems

Participants test interventions, explore unintended consequences and resilience, and ask what our systems are actually designed to optimize. The session culminates in a shared exploration of what a system designed to thrive would need to do, beginning to identify the principles that distinguish sustainable, restorative and regenerative approaches.

Projects Enter the Room

Short, focused presentations introduce the real initiatives that will become the working material for Day 2. Each project frames the system it seeks to influence, what it is building, where it is today, where it is stuck and what it needs from the room.

Outcome: A shared language for seeing interconnection, complexity and systemic change and a new question: not simply “What problem do we want to solve?” but “What system do we want to help transform?”

DAY 2: REIMAGINE THE SYSTEM

From Ideas to Regenerative Impact

Question: What would we build differently if we designed for the health of the whole system?

SESSION

DESCRIPTION

Project Clinics

The group works on selected projects together. Rather than evaluating or pitching them, participants explore what each initiative is really intervening in, where it creates value, where it may inadvertently extract value or create unintended consequences, and which relationships or capabilities may be missing.

From Projects to Ecosystems

Projects are placed into one shared system map. Participants identify connections across capital, knowledge, infrastructure, resources, communities, data, talent and networks, exploring how relationships between initiatives can create forms of value and impact that no project could achieve in isolation.

The Regenerative Capital Challenge

A hands-on challenge asks participants to allocate capital not to a portfolio of companies, but to the regeneration of a living system. The exercise explores how different forms of capital can work together to strengthen resilience, prosperity, ecological health and community over time.

Outcome: Stronger projects, new connections between them, and a shift from thinking in terms of individual solutions to designing interconnected systems for long-term value and resilience.

DAY 3: ACT ON THE SYSTEM

Leadership into Action

Question: What can happen because the people in this room met that could not have happened otherwise?

| SESSION                                | DESCRIPTION                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|----------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| The Capital We Bring            | Participants map the different forms of capital they can mobilize, whether financial, intellectual, social, relational and institutional capital, as well as influence, networks and execution capacity, aiming to identify where these resources could unlock progress for others in the room. |
| The VIVRA Table                 | People, projects, needs and resources come together. Participants identify where they can contribute, what they need from others, and concrete opportunities for introductions, expertise, investment, partnerships and shared initiatives.                                                     |
| 90-Day Action Lab               | Insights are translated into action. Each participant defines a concrete 90-day commitment: what will happen, with whom, the first action, the timeframe and what success will look like.                                                                                                       |
| What Do We See Differently Now? | A closing circle returns to the questions that opened the retreat: what has changed in how we see the future, and what will we do differently because we see it?                                                                                                                                |

Outcome: A visible network of commitments and collaborations, with clear next steps for the following 90 days and a pathway for continued action beyond the retreat.

THE JOURNEY

SEE: Move beyond isolated problems and learn to recognize relationships, feedback loops, trade-offs and leverage points.

REIMAGINE: Apply this way of seeing to real initiatives, strengthen them and discover how individual projects can become part of a wider regenerative ecosystem.

ACT: Mobilize the capital, relationships and agency in the room and turn insight into concrete collaboration and 90-day action.

 Participants leave with a new way of seeing systems, a practical understanding of regenerative principles, stronger projects, new ecosystem connections and concrete commitments, better equipped to use their leadership, capital and networks to create systemic change.
